

A NATURAL SETTING

Taking care to enhance and preserve the natural environment, the neighborhood homes and the Arthur Hills golf course wind lazily through the native landscape, bordered by natural buffers, stands of native trees, and sparkling lakes, all of which serve as quiet retreats for the native wildlife. The proposed linear park and greenway trail, extending along part of the western border of the community, will allow restoration of natural habitats, and will enable residents to walk, run, skate or bike along the trail. It's a soothing escape inspired by nature and an idyllic setting for a residential retreat.

At Heron Creek, nature's beauty is always close by.

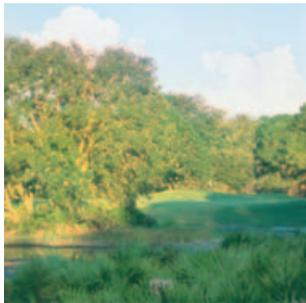

Imagine a community so environmentally sensitive, the surrounding wildlife habitat has not only been preserved, it has been improved.

Endless natural beauty is the setting for the extraordinary country club community of Heron Creek.

Heron Creek's active club lifestyle takes place in an island of natural tranquility. More than 430 acres of the 676-acre gated community have been set aside as open space, including lakes, fairways, and green space for residents and permanent, environmentally protected nature preserves, providing natural habitat to a wide variety of birds and other wildlife. Daily life at Heron Creek is complemented by the breathtaking views offered in this natural setting.
